

Community Organizing and Social Change in Light of Caritas in Veritate, 11/13/09

By Albert Schorsch, III

Copyright 2009, Albert Schorsch, III

All Rights Reserved

Presentation Notes for the Notre Dame Center for Ethics and Culture's 10th Annual Fall Conference—

“The Summons of Freedom: Virtue, Sacrifice, and the Common Good”

Community Organizing and Social Change in Light of Caritas in Veritate , 11/13/09.....	1
1 Intro.....	8

1.1 The twentieth-century North-American tradition of community organizing for social change has, since the 2008 presidential campaign of Barack Obama, taken front and center in public debates on national policy and on faith-based social action. Because Mr. Obama's rise as a community organizer in Chicago from 1985 to 1988 was partially supported by eight far South Side Catholic congregations in the Developing Communities Project (DCP), and because of his later work as a trainer for the sometime Church-supported Gamaliel Foundation, it is useful to consider the place of community organizing for social change in light of Catholic social teaching, and from the perspective of Caritas in Veritate in particular.

Community organizing, while often associated with radical traditions going back to the American Revolution and figures like Thomas Paine, to late Nineteenth Century union activism, to European Marxism and American radical movements, to early Twentieth Century radical and Progressive traditions, has since the New Deal of the late 1930s been financially supported and sustained at critical points by Christian congregations, and by Catholic parishes and dioceses in particular. The stereotypical paradox of 1960s community organizing was that the mites of pious widows eventually made their way from the parish collection basket into the pockets of chain-smoking, cursing, hard-drinking organizers. But as community organizing has professionalized like other fields over the decades, oftentimes today one finds among such organizers idealistic and committed young professionals with or seeking master's degrees, with experience in service work overseas, and with a lifetime commitment to their religious beliefs or studied personal political philosophies.

The Catholic Church in the United States has since the 1950s invested hundreds of millions of dollars in community organizing through the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, its predecessors, and through the generosity of individual bishops and pastors. The relationship between houses of worship and community organizing is at least symbiotic, if not saprophytic. It is clear from the autobiographies and handbooks of leading organizers that their preferred source of funding is from congregations and individual donors, and not from foundations or government, since there is a perception that congregation-supported organizations are closer to the citizens and independent from government and from the machinations of wealth. There is thus a strong attraction on the part of community organizations to seek “church money.” Had the fortunate circumstance of established American congregational wealth not persisted since the 1950s, community organizing as we know it today would not exist.

Since this paper is constrained to serve as a conference presentation, I will focus on the unique perspective of Caritas in Veritate (henceforth CIV) on questions of social justice, social action and organization. At various steps I will then refocus the discussion on community organization and social change in light of this marvelous and foundational encyclical.

Secular traditions of community organizing face an immediate challenge with the first sentence of CIV: "Charity in truth, to which Jesus Christ bore witness by his earthly life and especially by his death and resurrection, is the principal driving force behind the authentic development of every person and of all humanity." (CIV, 1) This “Charity in truth” cannot be reduced to the “speaking truth to power” which reappeared as a catch-phrase in 1955 in Quaker parlance (it may have had 18th century roots) and spread throughout the political world, but is a recognition that love and truth are both gifts, and that both are expressed in the person of Christ.

Benedict XVI’s characteristic Augustinian turn implying both action and reception expresses this relational mutuality in love: "Charity is love received and given. It is 'grace' (cháris)." (CIV, 5). From these two sentences, Benedict’s argument unfolds throughout the encyclical.

The word “charity” has had a mixed reputation in the traditions of social change. The critical education textbook writer Joel Spring characteristically treats charity as social control on the part of the rich for the poor. The charitable acts listed in the biblical Corporal Works of Mercy from the Gospel of Matthew—to feed the hungry, give drink to the thirsty, clothe the naked, etc.—are often seen as not enough, as not producing fundamental social change, if not producing dependency. The leading Industrial Areas Foundation (IAF) community organizer Edward T. Chambers—himself a trainer of Mr. Obama—described his frustration working in the clothing room of the Catholic interracial apostolate Friendship House in New York City in the 1950s and his determination to seek a change in society that would not make such clothing rooms necessary.

But for Benedict, charity cannot be so narrowly defined as simply a list of charitable acts. We do well to return and to dwell upon Benedict’s starting point, which takes us in a renewed direction: "In Christ, charity in truth becomes the Face of his Person, a vocation for us to love our brothers and sisters in the truth of his plan. Indeed, he himself is the Truth (cf. Jn 14:6)." (CIV, 1).

If community organizing is in part speaking truth to power, then to the extent that community organizing avoids speaking of Christ, it therefore avoids speaking the truth.

Community organizing, in the “relational” rubric described by Edward T. Chambers, treats each conversation outside of friendship or intimate love as public, potentially political, and as an open expression of citizenship. The IAF’s approach, developed over several decades, weaves together a web of hundreds if not thousands of “relational meetings” among congregants and citizens. These meetings combine story-telling, personal testimony, and information-gathering into an accumulated Gestalt leading to concerted public action of potentially thousands of persons. A number of IAF-organized campaigns have led to new laws, and to governmental reforms. 8

- 1.2 While the controversies related to ACORN have appeared in the press 10
- 1.3 Community organizing has been a presence in American Catholicism since the 1930s 10
- 1.4 Shoe is on the other foot 10
 - 1.4.1 Speaking truth to power 10
 - Quaker phrase re-popularized in 1955, ostensibly from 1700s 10
 - 1.4.2 With organizer president in the White house 10
 - 1.4.3 On speaking truth to community organizers 10
- 2 The turning point is the first point 11
 - 2.1 Learning to say No first 11
 - 2.2 BXVI's definition of Charity as loved given and received 11
 - 2.2.1 An Augustinian turn of active and passive, showing relational nature of love 11
 - 2.3 The first Word spoken should be the name of Jesus 11
 - 2.3.1 Sometimes, this is literally true 11
 - 2.3.2 Act in such a way that they think of Jesus 11
- 3 Justifications for community organizing 11
 - 3.1 The mediating institution argument 11
 - 3.1.1 Hegel's Philosophy of Right 11
 - The Church is good because it is a mediating institution 11
 - 3.2 The social capital or social cohesion argument 11
 - 3.3 The right to representation, collective bargaining, to redress of grievances 11
 - 3.3.1 The rights of a citizen 11
 - 3.4 The leveraging of congregations into sources of both wealth and of soldiers for political action 11
 - 3.5 The need to stick up for the poor, the little guy, the preferential option 11
 - 3.6 Thousands of books, articles, evaluations, studies 11
- 4 IAF 11
 - 4.1 Industrial Areas Foundation has been most closely associated not only with American Catholic history, but with some of the marquis organizing efforts, including those in Chicago, the Kodak strike, those of the United Farm Workers, and those in the Southwest and Texas 11
 - 4.2 Has done many things right as an organization 12

4.2.1	Although both analogies are stretched, as Lenin was to Marx, or perhaps Paul was to Jesus, Ed Chambers is to Saul Alinsky.....	12
	Msgr. Jack Egan considered him a genius, and considered him the person who accomplished what Alinsky only conceptualized.....	12
4.2.2	Continues to learn from its mistakes.....	12
4.2.3	Increases in sophistication	12
4.2.4	Eclectic.....	12
	captured the learnings of social movements and of trends in communications and psychology	12
	Proving out Alisdair MacIntyre's observation in his book on Edith Stein about the persistence as common sense sayings of century's old philosophical positions	12
4.2.5	Relational	12
	Public, politically-action oriented, self-revealing story-telling	12
	The non-religious, non-technique claims.....	12
	Leaders of movements have often denied that they engage either in a specialized religion or a mere practice of technique, but will often focus on their approach as a way of life, which in the end both implies a religion and at least something of a technique.	12
	Like psychologists who develop a new technique or school of thought, like Csikszentmihalyi, or Bob Kegan at Harvard, which they then attempt to apply to all problems.....	12
	Kind of like saying it's not about the money	12
	Strong religious and technical claims	12
	A counter-theology	12
	get people out of the pews	12
5	What is lacking in Community Organizing and change agency.....	13
5.1	A more explicit scientific approach	13
5.1.1	James Heckman's presentation on early childhood health and education	13
	http://www.partnershipforsuccess.org/uploads/20081021_capabilformchiDISP20080921ajlt11.pdf	13
	Breastfeeding as change agency	13
	Aside on La Leche league and its public health contribution.....	13
	More significant socially and in public health than most other change-agency efforts	13
5.1.2	To be fair, Chambers mentions early childhood in his book	13
	And his assumptions mirror those of recent Elinor Ostrum's work on the Commons	13
	Ostrum points out the role of communications and the establishment of trust as a solution to the tragedy of the commons	13
5.2	False solidarity	13
5.2.1	Evidence-based	13
	plumbers union Chicago lead solder example	13
	Clean water act of 1986 ended the use of lead.....	13
	as if lead solder was mother's milk	14
5.3	An accidental approach to development and education.....	14

5.3.1 Oftentimes, organizing efforts found a school or a training program, or LDCs	14
Focus Hope in Detroit.....	14
Homeboy Industries in East LA.....	14
5.3.2 The closing of Catholic schools.....	14
A greater social good lost	14
hundreds of millions expended by CCHD and related bodies and bishops.....	14
Would a better social good have been achieved through investing the hundreds of millions into Catholic intercity schools?.....	14
5.4 The use of manipulation and deception	14
5.4.1 The All's fair in love and organizing approach.....	14
5.4.2 The priest who won an IAF "oscar" for staring at Cardinal Bernardin and getting $1M for IAF--see page 117 of Roots for Radicals, by Edward T. Chambers with Michael Cowan.....	14
5.5 The revolving-door dialectic of corruption.....	14
5.5.1 From Alinsky's books	14
The vicious circle of having to organize against the person who was originally empowered by organizing.....	14
Those of us who had to, and may still have to, deal on a day to day basis with some of the self-serving egotists and crooks empowered by Alinsky and Msgr. Egan are not thankful for the experience	14
Not yet connected with a theory of corruption and bureaucracy	14
Hernando de Soto has developed the theory.....	14
5.6 IAF's recent approach	15
5.6.1 Based upon relational approach.....	15
Ever so close to Catholicism.....	15
Sympathetic to Hasidism, in which one person's vision answers another	15
And these shared statements and visions accumulate into concerted political action.....	15
5.6.2 What Ed Chambers doesn't quite get (pg. 126 of Roots for Radicals) and the Pope gets, is that the citizen and the economic actor live--and belong--in the same world	15
"My predecessor John Paul II drew attention to this question in Centesimus Annus, when he spoke of the need for a system with three subjects: the market, the State and civil society[92]." (CIV 38).....	15
Economic forces are as merciless as the forces of disease or nature like weather and agricultural disaster--we need science to understand and to cope with them	15
The fallacy of Chicago politics, now spread nationally.....	15
Political power cannot wipe out the economic nature of our interactions	15
Use the example of taxation and housing abandonment.....	15
800,000 individualized notices, called tax bills, have a tremendous effect	15
why the work of Prof. Robert Shiller at Yale is so important.....	15
why the work of the Urban Data Visualization lab at UIC is so critical	15

Why we founded it.....	15
"The economy in the global era seems to privilege the former logic, that of contractual exchange, but directly or indirectly it also demonstrates its need for the other two: political logic, and the logic of the unconditional gift." (CIV 37).	16
5.6.3 Disconnected with next generation economic development strategies.....	16
An advance beyond NGOs, micro-lending, in C.K. Prahalad's Bottom of the Pyramid strategies, beyond social entrepreneurship.....	16
Nancy M. Barry's coupling of agribusiness with the poor farmers	16
Bio on 2nd page of -- https://kellogg-isc.campusgroups.com/web_page.aspx?order=2&id=6809	16
Ms. Barry speaks openly of her faith, and of grace. Her father is a Roman Catholic Deacon.....	16
Knew Barack Obama's mother back in the day in Indonesia	16
Enterprise Solutions to Poverty	16
An application of the mixed for-profit/non-profit models called for by Benedict XVI	16
By increasing standards of safety and cleanliness in small farming, to connect small farmers with agribusiness, to increase their income from 50 cents a day to $2 per day, which for them is a revolution	16
These approaches have not yet been returned to America.....	16
http://wokai.typepad.com/files/nancy-barry-10.30.07.pdf	16
5.6.4 Movement toward political action, citizenship.....	16
Similar to Solzhenitsyn's civic virtue.....	16
Falls prey to the political illusion.....	16
Two hundred years of the same reform laws enacted over and over again ..	16
prison reform.....	16
child welfare.....	16
slavery/human trafficking	16
The human services lottery	16
underfunded shell game of over-promised services that can't be delivered.....	17
IAF does not confront the political illusion. Still something of a belief in inevitable progress based upon the relational approach- To be fair, Chambers recognizes that good actions can have socially bad results.	17
5.6.5 We are at the end of an era.....	17
The large scale government funding of community organization marks its end as an independent force in society and as a mediating institution.	17
IAF will lose its Catholic culture signs and linkages with the death of its second generation of leaders.	17
6 Solution	17
6.1 Speak the name of Jesus first.....	17
6.1.1 Without Jesus being the name spoken first, without the Gospel being proclaimed, social action is all just technique, is all just incantation	17
Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who do build it.	17
Seek first the Kingdom of God	17

Modes of Action	17
Catholic Action	17
Fr. Putz and Msgr. Hillenbrand two exemplars	17
Hillenbrand vindicated in CIV 15 -- the connection between life ethics and social ethics.....	17
The movement away from Catholic Action as such	17
The Egan approach of no action unless interfaith action.....	17
Action at a price: Silence on the abortion issue.....	17
Not speaking out for the really little guy, the human being in gestation..	17
This approach of Catholic reticence has run out of gas, is, in Cardinal George's words, an exhausted project.....	17
Silence on the incarnational truth of the Eucharist as being the turning point of the world.....	17
Catholicizing Community Organizing.....	18
Solidarnosc.....	18
The Academy of St. Priscilla example.....	18
We began each meeting with a prayer	18
used community organizing techniques of home meetings, communication networks, and carefully staged public meetings	18
6.1.2 The congregation must speak the truth of Christ to the organizers.	18
6.2 The combination of Charity and Truth	18
6.2.1 There is a science to this, and it is not merely the science of propaganda, but the science of rhetoric	18
A new science of human behavior and action	18
Vs. the NSF model of production of knowledge out of bits of information vs. revelation of truth as a gift in Benedict's CIV	18
Chaim Perelman "new rhetoric" all the rage in the 1970s	18
Picked up by the communications professors, ignored by the English professors stuck in the swamp since Paris, 1968.....	18
6.2.2 Sanity and Social Justice.....	18
A dialogue between moral action and science.....	18
6.3 We are back to the two cities -- the three geographic locations of the Kingdom within scripture, we are back to my Kingdom being within you, among you, and my Kingdom being not of this world.....	18
6.3.1 Benedict has the answer, that the Kingdom is Jesus.....	18